OFFICIAL SEES FURTHER RISE IN LIVING COST

BLS Index Indicates U. S. Near Economic Goals Set By President

WASHINGTON, July 19—The nation's economic outlook today was for continued high production, record employment and a rise in the cost of living.

This was the analysis of Ewan Clague, commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics, who reported that "downward pressures" of last Spring have been eased.

Clague forecast continuance of civilian employment at the present record-breaking level of slightly over 60 million jobs through September and said it "may go even higher" in the Summer months.

A decline is foreseen in the Fall when agricultural work drops off and students return to the classroom.

THE BLS official said a "favorable aspect" of the present picture is the capacity output of steel and coal which assures continuous availability of basic raw materials. He said production stability and efficiency should improve as a result.

Clague indicated that the coal price increase resulting from the recent wage boosts to John L. Lewis' half million miners will not materially affect the cost of living. Coal accounts for only 2.1 percent of the BLS index.

However, recent sharp gains in some food prices and forthcoming rent increases probably will send the cost-of-living barometer to a new peak within the next few months.

THE COST of living index reached its previous peak last March at 156.3 percent of the 1939 level and then declined to 155.8 in May.

The BLS commissioner reported that the nation has "hit or is close to" the economic goals fixed by President Truman for attainment during 1947.

Average weekly earnings among more than 13 million manufacturing workers rose to a new peak of $48.91 in June and the full effect of the recent 15-cent-hourly "pattern" increases has not been fully felt.

Clague said wages now are double pre-war levels, but when higher prices are taken into account, national purchasing power is up only 29 percent.

Another bright spot in the current economic picture is the unexpected gain in housing construction during June. About 75,000 new permanent dwelling units were started last month, a new postwar peak and a gain of 2,500 over May.

FLOOD DAMAGE IN THREE STATES IS $900,000,000

MILWAUKEE, July 19—Flood and storm damage to crops and soil in Iowa, Missouri and Illinois during May and June was fixed at 900 million dollars today by the U. S. soil conservation service.

A report issued by the service in Milwaukee said more than 491 million dollars of the total resulted from actual soil loss. The value of crops destroyed was 147 million dollars and damage to roads and railroad right-of-ways was 36 million dollars.

Holy Land Tenser Than Usual After Sea Fight

By International News Service
Four American sea-faring men, all members of the Jewish blockade-runner "European Exodus 1947" which was seized in a bitter fight off the Palestine coast yesterday, were under arrest in Haifa today.

Another of the American crew lay dead, one of the three young Jews who perished as a result of the battle against a 50-man British naval boarding party.

ROMANIANS SAY PEOPLE FAVOR MARSHALL PLAN

PARIS, July 19—A group of Romanian statesmen in exile declared today that their country and all eastern Europe support the Marshall plan but outside pressure prevents them from participating.

In a note to the 16 nations co-operating in the plan for European economic cooperation, the exiles, headed by former minister of foreign affairs Grigore Gafencu, said:

"The official Romania that refused to participate in the Paris conference is not the real Romania."

"The government imposed on the nation has been compelled once more to act against the will of the Romanian people."

The group of expatriates currently gathered in Paris includes Carol Dayla, former minister to Washington. Their message declared that official Romanian decisions have been manifestly harmful to the country.

which intercepted the blockade-runner. At least 19 other persons, including three British marines, were injured seriously in the clash.

Meanwhile, the Holy Land was even more tense than usual. The vanguard of the 4,554 uncertified immigrants aboard the ship were on their way to detention camps in Cyprus, and the Jewish underground—which has fought against the deportation of these persons—staged several anti-British incidents.

SHORTLY AFTER five British naval vessels herded the Jewish blockade-runner in Haifa yesterday, five other warships of his majesty's Mediterranean fleet hove to at another trouble spot. The flagship Liverpool and four escorting ships moored at Phaleron bay, one of the harbors of Athens.

Dispatches from Bucharest said that the parliamentary immunity enjoyed by Dr. Iuliu Maniu, aged leader of Romania's national peasant party, has been voided. So also has the immunity of four of his aides.

The London Daily Express said this step was taken by the Communist-dominated Romanian parliament so that the five opposition leaders can be prosecuted for "plotting against the state to overthrow the regime."

SOLON CHARGES SUPER MILITARY SETUP PLANNED

Hoffman Fights Armed Forces Merger Bill; House In Special Meeting

WASHINGTON, July 19—Rep. Hoffman (R) Mich., co-sponsor of the Army-Navy unification bill, today charged that an attempt is being made to establish a "super military organization."

Hoffman made his assertion as the house opened debate on the senate-approved legislation. The congressman charged: "Because of the fear brought about by propaganda, the military seeks, and apparently will be successful, to abdicate its responsibility, to shirk its responsibility, and turn over to the joint chiefs of staff, to a super military organization imposed upon our armed forces, the duty of providing a national defense."

THE CHAIRMAN of the house executive expenditures committee, which revised slightly the senate bill creating a single national military establishment, declared he would vote for the measure because congress was going to adopt unification legislation. The committee bill, he said, was the "least harmful."

Hoffman asserted he sponsored the administration merely as an official duty. As further indication of his dislike for the bill bearing his name, the congressman turned over to Rep. Wadsworth (R) N. Y., a committee member and long-time exponent of Army-Navy unification, the task of (Continued on Page Two)

BRITISH SHIPS IN GREEK PORT; 'WAR' GOES ON

ATHENS, July 19—A British naval flotilla—comprising five warships—arrived in Greek waters today as Athens government forces continued to badger dedicated Communist guerrilla units in the mountains of Epirus province.

Among the vessels of the British Mediterranean fleet which dropped anchor in Phaleron bay, easternmost of the harbors of Athens, was the flagship H. M. S. Liverpool. It was accompanied by four escorting craft.

In northwestern Greece, meanwhile, Greek government troops continued attempts to again encircle elements of the guerrilla force which—Athens official insisted—came from the Soviet satellite of Albania.

Low-flying aircraft again strafed the split-up rebel units which apparently were trying to regroup in the mountains between Ioannina and Konitsa—two prime objectives of their abortive assault earlier in the week.

To Cabinet

KENNETH C. ROYALL, assistant secretary of war, receives congratulatory messages upon announcement by President Truman of his appointment to succeed Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. Effective July 24, Patterson's resignation comes on eve of house consideration of Army-Navy unification bill.

FORRESTAL TO HEAD DEFENSE

Resignation Of Patterson Insures New Post For Navy Secretary

WASHINGTON, July 19—The resignation of Secretary of War Patterson insured today the appointment of Navy Secretary Forrestal as the nation's first secretary of national defense.

Patterson resigned Friday, on the eve of house consideration of the senate-approved Army-Navy unification bill. President Truman immediately named Undersecretary of War Kenneth C. Royall to succeed him.

Informed sources repeatedly have forecast that the President would designate Forrestal as secretary of national defense.

IT WAS A foregone conclusion that Patterson would step out before Mr. Truman named Forrestal. Otherwise, by continuing as secretary of war, Patterson would have to serve under a man who had been his junior in the cabinet.

The unification bill, which virtually is certain to win congressional approval, provides for a single secretary of national defense to head the armed services with subordinate secretaries of war, navy and air force.

The appointment of Royall marked the peak in the meteoric rise of the North Carolina lawyer from an Army colonel to civilian (Continued on Page Two)

MILITARY TRAINING BILL FAVORED BY COMMITTEE

HARGUS CREEK FLOODS PARK, EAST END AREAS

Carperville Threatened By Water Again; Bridge Work Delayed

Many Circleville area residents scanned the skies Saturday in apprehension of more damaging rains and thunder storms following Friday afternoon's deluge unpredicted rain which sent Hominy, Hargus and Scippo creeks on the rampage for the second time in five days and added to the damage done by the disastrous near-cloudburst Monday night.

The waters of Scippo creek overflowed the banks of that stream, flowed over U. S. Route 23, south of Circleville, and inundated a section of the Kingston pike southeast of Circleville.

Four miles from Circleville, Pickaway County Engineer Henry T. McCrady said, a half-mile stretch of the Kingston pike was under one to one and one-half feet of water from Scippo creek for several hours. However, the flood waters had subsided Saturday morning.

RESIDENTS in the Carperville section at the east edge of Circleville, remembering the necessitated flight from their homes when flood waters of Hargus creek flooded that section, Friday night made hurried preparations to flee for a second time but, luckily, the overflow from the stream was insufficient to cause serious damage. Water covered a section of Watt street and nearby lanes.

The water did, however, carry away the temporary foot-bridge which had been erected on State Route 22 to accommodate pedestrians after Monday night's flood waters caused the collapse of the 63-year-old bridge over Hargus creek. Engineer McCrady said (Continued on Page Two)

LAUSCHE STEPS IN CONTROVERSY ON LIQUOR STOCK

CLEVELAND, July 19—Former Gov. Frank J. Lausche stepped into the controversy today over the state liquor department's inventory.

Maintaining that he "was not the purchasing agent" and could not keep up with detailed transactions in the department, the former chief executive defended himself by quoting two sets of figures.

When he took office, Lausche said, brandy and rum and two slow-moving liquors comprised more than 69 per cent of the entire inventory. That figure has come down to 13 per cent, he added.

The former governor also said that during his administration the total inventory rose about $6,000,000.

"I want to point out," Lausche said, "that there was only 23 per cent of whisky on hand when I took office but 69 per cent of rum and brandy."

"There was approximately 32 times more rum in the inventory than the normal percentage requires. There was 68 times more brandy than the normal inventory requires."

Lausche said that it was regrettable that "an effort has been made to mislead the public in making a comparison of the inventory of January, 1947, and January, 1941."

He added that the public would "have to guess" why the present liquor director, Dale Dunifon, who made the 1941 and 1947 comparisons, omitted the two-year periods of 1943 and 1945.

BABY DROWNS

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 19—Scioto county coroner Virgil Fowler returned a verdict of accidental drowning today in the death of 18-month-old Aletta Jean Litz. The child's body was found by her father, Earl Litz, in a stream near their farm home 15 miles northeast of Portsmouth.

Republicans To Try For Tax Cut At Next Session

WASHINGTON, July 19—House Majority Leader Halleck (R) Ind. forecast today that the GOP majority will make "another try" for tax reductions in the next session of congress.

One Republican leader said there was even a "possibility" that the Jan. 1, 1948 tax-cut bill successfully vetoed by President Truman will be re-introduced before congress adjourns on July 26.

Mr. Truman's second tax veto in 31 days was overridden by the house but was sustained in the senate by a margin of five votes. Two senate Democrats and one Republican "switched" from support of the measure to add strength to the President's victory. The vote was 57 to 36.

REP. KNUTSON (R) Minn., chairman of the house ways and means committee said he would not re-offer his bill. But Halleck said:

"My view is that we Republicans will make another try for tax reductions in the next session of congress, and we are going to overhaul the entire hodge-podge tax code."

Sen. Millikin (R) Col., senate finance chairman, said he was "very happy with the record we made on the tax bill."

Millikin bitterly accused Pres-

HOUSING AGENCY REORGANIZATION ACTION SLATED

WASHINGTON, July 19—The senate planned to act today on President Truman's housing agency reorganization plan and three war veterans bills.

Pushed aside temporarily was the filibuster - blocked Kansas City election probe resolution of Sen. Kem (R) Mo.

Carrying the first priority was the reorganization plan, by which the President would group most of the federal government's housing agencies into a single "housing and home finance agency."

Majority Whip Wherry (R) Neb. said he expected "considerable" senate debate.

The house disapproved the plan. However, under the reorganization act of 1945 such a plan proposed by the President becomes effective unless both houses of congress reject it.

Meanwhile, Sen. Morse (R) Ore., had the promise of the GOP leadership that his three veterans bills would get action.

CARDINAL STOPS FIRE

NEW YORK, July 19—John J. Broderick, living counterpart of fiction's and Hollywood's better detectives, isn't going to be around to terrorize the hoods any more.

He retired last night after 25 years of service in the department during which time he virtually rewrote the book on what a strong-arm cop should be. Broderick was a man of action, preferably the two-fisted variety.

He came up to the department from the gas house district and never forgot the lessons he learned from that neighborhood of the better ways to commit mayhem.

Broderick singled out the little and big toughs alike. He could not tolerate crime in any form. He preferred to work alone and when possible without his gun.

HARGUS CREEK FLOODS PARK, EAST END AREAS

the foot-bridge will be replaced as quickly as possible.

THE COUNTY engineer said Saturday that the high waters Friday night virtually destroyed the repair work done during the past four days by county road crews in the "Devil's Backbone" area. The work had been made necessary by Monday night's flood.

Swirling high waters of Hargus creek Friday night washed away sufficient soil to cause a large sycamore tree on the rear of the property occupied by George Crum, East Water street, near the North Court street bridge over the creek to topple into the creek. The fallen tree dammed the flow of the water. Policemen toiled from 10:30 p. m. until 1 a. m. Saturday, sawing the tree, to eliminate this dam.

Charles Carter, Circleville weather observer, reported that the rainfall measured .85 of one inch, and the Scioto river level was 6.68 feet at 8 a. m. Saturday. The high temperature reading Friday was 82 degrees, the low was 65, and the thermometer registered 66 at 8 a. m. Friday.

The official weather forecast indicated cloudy and cooler weather for Saturday and Sunday. Heavily overcast skies Saturday morning gave strong hint of additional rain.

Considerable overflow from Hargus creek spread over Ted Lewis park Friday afternoon, adding to the damage caused by Monday night's storm.

Franklin county prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett replied sharply today to suggestions that he investigate transactions of the state liquor department.

Bartlett assured Dunifon that he would "perform my duty as I see it" and added: "But I also expect the same conduct of you as head of the liquor control department as well as from the attorney general and from the governor himself."

BOSTON, July 19—The United States government, in response to a flood of protests from Massachusetts residents, took steps today to assist two former Worcester mothers reported imprisoned with their six children in Siberian collectivist camps by the Russian government.

An official of the state department announced that the U. S. embassy in Moscow has been directed to make a full report on Mrs. Valdemaras Carneckis, 48, the former Eleanor Schultz, and her five children. Carneckis, police charge d'affairs in Washington in 1923, was premier of Poland at the outbreak of World War II.

Claims that a third Worcester woman was being held prisoner by the Soviets despite American citizenry, brought from the state department the statement that "she has no claim to American citizenship."

Anthony O. Shallna, Lithuanian consul in Boston, said Mrs. Isabel Gustanis, the former Isabel Avetian of Worcester, and her two children are held prisoners. ## GIRLS WHO FLED DETENTION HOME FOUND QUICKLY

Wanda Smith, 16, Derby, fled with two other girls from the state bureau of juvenile research at Columbus, Friday, but all three were apprehended Saturday morning at West Jefferson and they were returned to the institution. The other girls are Joan Agnes Laird, 17, Euclid, and Mary Lowe, 16, Cincinnati.

The girls escaped, authorities said Saturday, in an automobile which a 17-year-old boy who is a former ward of the BJR stole at Springfield and drove to Columbus for that purpose. The youth had recently escaped from the Montgomery county juvenile detention home at Dayton.

Dr. Maurice Newburger, bureau of juvenile research superintendent, said the girls were on the playground under supervision of an attendant when they suddenly ran to the waiting auto and the driver speeded away. Attaches of the Pickaway county juvenile court said they had no record of the Smith girl and assumed that she was sent to the BJR from some other county.

opening debate on the legislation.

Hoffman advised newsmen that later in the day he will probably give the house "some inside history as to the procedure used to get the bill out of committee."

GOP LEADERSHIP called the house into an unusual 10 a. m. Saturday session in an effort to complete action on the bill, the last major piece of "must" legislation to come before the house prior to the scheduled adjournment of the congress next Saturday.

Wadsworth scouted Hoffman's fears that the military would receive undue power. He maintained that "all through the set-up civilians prevail." Wadsworth told the house:

"Here we have a piece of machinery that should work. During the war we saw all sorts of devices resorted to in great haste."

Hoffman reiterated charges that the Navy was "gagged" and forced to accept the legislation, which he termed "the culmination of over 25 years of effort by military elements to gain greater power within the government."

He charged that the present bill "originated in the war department" and represented "a total abdication by congress of its authority over the armed forces."

'A Religious Landmark'

The old Jamestown church, founded by early American settlers, is a religious shrine for visitors to the South. It is one of the famous churches of Virginia. But it is more than that. It is an inspiration to free people everywhere.

Within its walls, early settlers meditated and prayed for solution of problems that beset them and which at times seemed onerous. Their problems found solution and their souls peace within the inspiring setting of this beautiful old church, for God was always there dwelling among them, blessing them and their lives.

About this church nature finds its most beautiful expression. Ivy grows, trees branch out and bud. Shade cools the summer visitors to Jamestown's shrine. Here, too, the seasons wax and wane. Shower and sunshine visit Jamestown, just as they do any other community. People here also are born and die.

The church is the anchor of civilization. Denominations are man made, but the church was established by God. Down through the ages, man has felt the need of a higher power when misfortune befell him. He found surcease to his grief within his church.

When we look upon the Jamestown church, or upon any church, it is well to reflect that the real beauty of the edifice lies not so much in its architecture, but within its interior, where the lives of its members have been glorified and beautified. The church as an institution has set many a man's foot back onto the right path, and has sent him forth to glorify God. Go to church next Sunday. You will find within a beauty and satisfaction that never showed up on its exterior.

Job Faces Problem of Suffering

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for July 20 is Job 1-6:26; 13:15, 19, 21-26; 23:1-6, 42; James 5:11, the Memory Verse being Ephesians 4:32, "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other.")

THE STORY of Satan's cynical remark to the Lord about Job, who, he said, would not continue his faith in God if he lost his riches and was greatly afflicted, was told in this column two weeks ago to explain how it happened that these trials came upon him.

The whole problem of how evil came into the world and why some people who are wicked prosper and others who lead exemplary lives are the preys of misfortune, is discussed but not determined, unless it is by the assumption that suffering often is a purifier for those who take their trials in the spirit of Job, although even he became very melancholy and felt deserted—as who wouldn't, with all his afflictions?

In the first place, Satan was told he might afflict Job by taking away his material possessions and even his children, but that his person was not to be touched. After the various messengers told him that first his oxen, plowing in the field, and his asses, had been taken by the Sabeans and the servants tending them killed, except the one messenger who escaped; that fire from heaven had killed his sheep and the servants with them; that the Chaldeans had carried off the camels, and worst of all, that his sons and daughters had been killed when a strong wind crashed their house down upon them, Job "rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped. And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly."

Satan suggests another affliction. When God called Satan's attention to Job's trust and loyalty after these disasters, Satan craftily suggested, "put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse Thee to Thy face."

"Behold, he is in thine hand," the Lord answered, "but save his life." So Job was afflicted with "sore boils from the sole of his foot unto his crown." At this Job's wife said to him, "Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die." This is the only mention we have of his wife, and she certainly did nothing to uphold and comfort him. Job, however, answered her, "Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?"

Three of Job's friends came to comfort and mourn with him. Eliphaz, the Temanite, Bildad, the Shuhite, and Zophar, the Naamathite. At first they sat silent, and "none spake a word unto him, for they saw that his grief was very great." There are a number of chapters devoted to their discourses, their theory being that Job must have sinned, and that these troubles came upon him as punishment. Job disagreed with them and told them so.

Suffering unspeakably in mind and body, Job "opened his mouth and cursed his day." He wished that he had died when he was a child, for now should I have lain still and been quiet, I should have slept; then had I been at rest.

As the three friends argued with him, insisting that he must have done evil to account for his plight, Job lost patience, saying, "Hold your peace, let me alone, that I may speak, and let come upon me what will," following this with a sublime expression of faith in God. "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him: but I will maintain mine own ways before Him."

The Lord Talks to Job
Finally, out of the whirlwind came the voice of the Lord to this suffering man, telling him of the extent and wonder of the works and all that it contains, and showing him how he, Job, is only a tiny part of it all. Job acknowledged the greatness of Jehovah. "I know that Thou canst do all things, and that no purpose of Thine can be restrained."
The Lord rebuked Job's three friends and told them to offer sacrifices for their salvation; and He told Job to pray for them, which he did. Then Job was rewarded for all his suffering by being given "twice as much as he had before." His relatives and old friends who had forsaken him in his adversity, probably thinking, like the three friends, that he had been wicked and was being punished, flocked to his home to eat and drink with him, and to bring him gifts.
Seven more sons and three beautiful daughters were born to him, and he lived to a very great age. Our last reference is to James 5:11, "Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful and of tender mercy."

BACK TO THE KITCHEN

IT WILL BE news to many that for 13 years a society has existed in England which has had for its purpose the driving of women back to kitchens and nurseries. Its aim, as implied by its title, The Anti-Woman Society, might even go so far as to do away with the fair sex altogether. Fred Workmull, founder and leader of this ambitious organization, has accused women of stealing men's jobs and ruining their morals.

A recent dispatch from London, however, announces that this enemy of half of society has been married for two months. Perhaps, after thirteen years of effort in behalf of a cause which was lost before it was undertaken, he decided to give the whole thing up and take over the care and support of one of the hated sex. His capitulation is thorough and complete.

It would be interesting to interview Fred in a couple of years and get his reactions to the married state. He might, depending on the woman he married, find that love for one woman has mellowed him to the point of benevolence toward all her sex; and on the other hand, he may have rejoined the ranks of the woman-haters.

But trying to turn the clock back never works very well. It keeps people looking back, not forward. It's better to take the new things in stride. Let the women work outside if need be, but keep before them the principle that caring for the family comes first. The new labor-savers have given women leisure that the grandmothers never knew. Sometimes it's better to use this leisure working than idling, and sometimes it's necessary for the mother to work outside the home. The question is not how she manages to care for the home but how well. If she does it well, what matter how? If not, let her learn. But let's go forward with home care, not back.

FAIR-MINDED EMPLOYERS

EDWIN A. LAHEY, reporting the activities of the academic sessions of the fourth annual race relations institute at Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., says that social workers and a few labor leaders get credit for any progress made in the fight against race discrimination in industry. The truth is, he says, that most steps have been taken by industry itself.

Mentioning especially the International Harvester Company of Chicago as having an enlightened hiring policy, he also named the Ford Motor Company, Aluminum Company of America, Western Electric, Willard Storage Battery and several others. A speaker from International Harvester advocated a firm alliance between employer and union in taking down bars formerly preventing hiring of Negro help.

Perhaps the time will come, not too far hence, when all employment can be based on individual merit, experience and fitness for the job. It is heartening to learn that a start has been made in this direction.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 19—In this era of flying discs, top General Eisenhower says this nation must guard itself well against insane attack, and congress is getting on with it. The long overdue bill unifying the Army, Navy and Air Corps has been set up for enactment. The Navy first negotiated assurance that its appropriations and activities will be rather fully continued. Hence the bill will not save much money. National defense appropriations for this fiscal year will run nearly $10,000,000,000. Even military men are beginning to become wary of themselves spending so much. State Secretary Marshall has pointed out soldiers ordinarily have not had much business experience, and should devote some effort to reducing their costs. Possibly a better guard against insane attack might be erected for a few hundred million rather than all those billions, certain congressmen have been muttering.

But the unification, which will eliminate some duplication, is being pushed forward finally now by the Republicans in a mild form agreeable to the heroes of the war (Eisenhower and Nimitz, for instance). It is a loose unification, but you will soon be calling the martial departments by their new name "national defense establishment". Changes from the original bill mainly involve legal rewording of preserve the status of naval aviation, the Marine corps and the administrative functions of routine bureaus which feared being sidetracked.

Final report of Chairman Gurney's armed services committee says "the world is entering an era in which war, if it comes, will be fought at speeds and accompanied by devastations that stagger the imagination." For this, the bill sets up a single overall secretary, three undersecretaries for land, sea and air, a council of national defense (under the president), a national security resources board, the joint chiefs of staff, a central intelligence agency (later three already operating), a procurement agency and research agency. It does not abolish much, but unifies what already exists.

Frankly, certain congressional people doubt that this will do, but are saying little yet. All defense activities have been glamorized by the indefinite but awful possibilities of atomic attack of directed air missiles. Defense talk has been almost entirely centered in these incalculable prospects, without getting down to cases. The atmosphere is fraught with flying questions and unclarified.

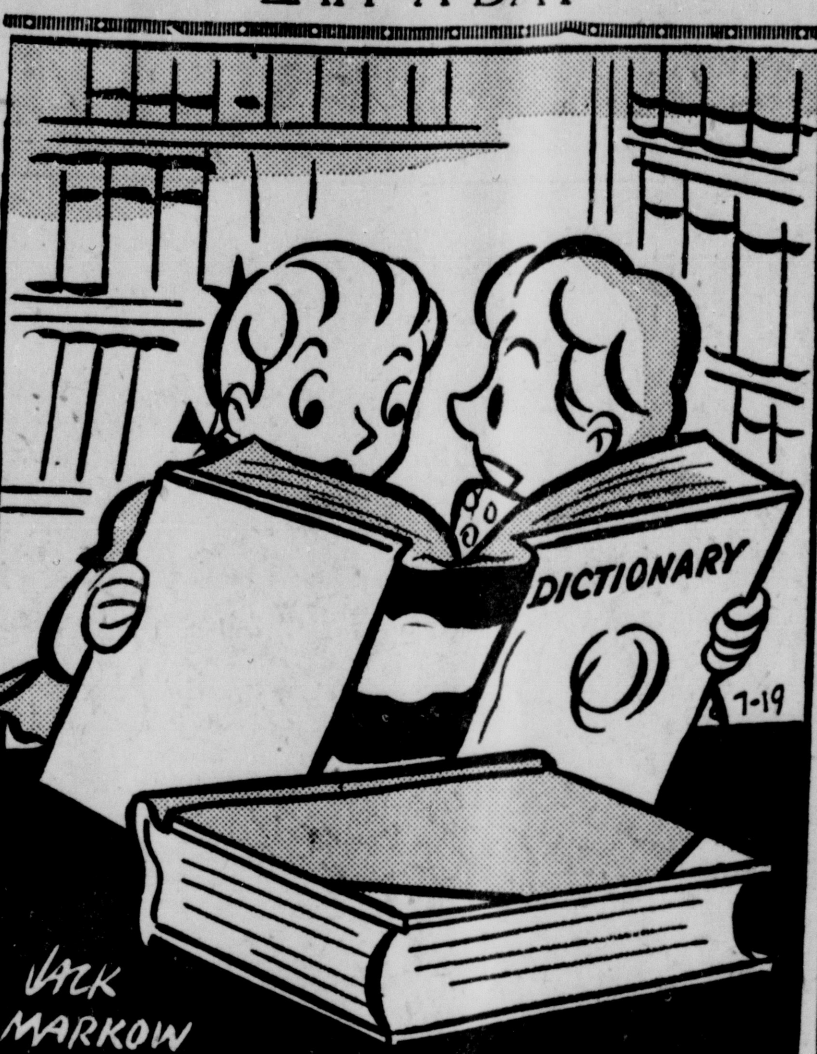

The only current possibility of attack would come from Russia. The Russian military situation, when measured against the United States, has many definite limitations. Military writers assume a missile attack would be launched across the Polar-Alaskan spaces at our industrial nerve centers (Michigan, Illinois, Ohio) to be followed by invasion from an airborne army. Much weather comes that way. Theoretically this might all be done in a few days with efficient organization, but the Russians have displayed no aptitude for organization, comparable for instance, to Nazi efficiency.

More and more, women seem to dress and act like men, and it makes a fellow sort of wonder what the final result will be.

What good is it to have "crack trains" and "crack planes", if so many of them crack up?

LAFF-A-DAY

"You've got to know how to spell a word to look it up to find out how to spell it!"

DIET AND HEALTH

Prevention of Trichinosis

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PREVENTION of trichinosis is so easy that it is a pity for anybody to contract it. And, yet, this condition, which at best means a long, unpleasant illness, occurs fairly often, simply because people are not careful enough about cooking pork thoroughly.

Trichinosis comes almost entirely from the eating of pork infested with the parasite known as Trichinella spiralis. Either long and thorough cooking, or freezing at zero degrees Fahrenheit for 72 hours will kill all parasites. But unless the housewife knows the exact conditions under which the meat has been frozen, she will do better to play safe and cook all pork until the last tinge of pink has disappeared.

Symptoms of Trichinosis

The symptoms of trichinosis have been studied by Dr. Robert E. Ober, of Massachusetts.

Within three to five days after eating contaminated pork, such symptoms as sickness to the stomach, vomiting, pain in the abdomen, and diarrhea may develop. In this stage of the condition, the disorder is sometimes mistaken for an attack of grippé, acute kidney inflammation, rheumatic fever, or food poisoning.

In many instances, if disturbances of the stomach or bowel occur, a diagnosis of trichinosis is not made until later, because the symptoms are much like those of various abdominal disorders. The larvae are carried to the small blood vessels in the lung, to the heart, and the arteries in other parts of the body. They also pass into the eyelids, the diaphragm between the chest and abdomen, and the various muscles of the body. The worms then become encysted within the muscles and remain alive for many years. Encysted means that the worms are surrounded by a membrane or capsule.

Aching Muscles

Within ten to fourteen days after eating contaminated pork, if no stomach or bowel symptoms have occurred, the infestation may be shown by aching or tenderness in the muscles, chills, cough, swelling of the eyelids and a skin rash. Fever develops and may reach 105° Fahrenheit. These symptoms may continue for from five to seven weeks.

As a general rule, there is an increase in the number of white cells in the blood, and the kind of white cells known as eosinophils are also increased in number.

Complete recovery ordinarily occurs, but pains in the various muscles may sometimes persist for a long time.

Unfortunately, there does not seem to be any treatment of this condition which is of any particular value. However, the disorder can be prevented if all pork is either thoroughly cooked or frozen.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, July 19

THE outstanding auspices are for a very direct and concentrated marshalling of the forces, energies, and resources of every kind, upon the solid establishment of ambitious projects on a sound and enduring basis. There may be obstacles, delays and various aspects of limitation or interference, but these are likely to be vanquished by hard work, patience, initiative, thrift, and also the keen understanding of hidden factors. Intrigue, shrewdness and subtle manipulation of exceptional factors should have sound results.

Birthday Forecast

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which their own personal application, vision, understanding and highly focused energies and abilities should unite to meet and overcome certain stubborn obstacles, congestions, delays and other impediments, not only by main force but also by well-directed strategies. The wisdom, astuteness, sagacity and determination with which all opposing factors are met, should combine to bring enduring and long-term progress and success. Shun excess, extravagance and false values.

A child born on this day is generously gifted with varied factors and faculties for success against obstacles and frustrations. A direct and straightforward mode of action should insure enduring returns.

Sunday, July 20

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows the intervention of an abrupt event or situation in which the prearranged program and objective of the day may be set aside, being fraught with better promise for a happy, romantic and adventurous crises. This sudden turn of events may prove to be outside the regulation or conventional procedures of the day, but may prove lucrative and enjoyable.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a sudden turn of events, marking a complete change in affairs, with a sudden move in the direction of surprising and unforeseen denouements. Originality, fresh tactics or methods, vigorously and ingeniously engineered, should accelerate events into high gear of performance, progress and possibly romantic adventure. This of an unorthodox or unconventional aspect.

A child born on this day should progress through its originality,

CHAPTER TWENTY

LADY ANGKATELL sighed. "Of course, say what you like, a murder is an awkward thing—it upsets the servants and puts the general routine out—we were having ducks for lunch—fortunately they are quite nice eaten cold. . . . What does one do about Gerda, do you think? Something on a tray? A little strong soup, perhaps?"

Really, thought Midge, Lucy is inhuman! And then with a quail she reflected that it was perhaps because Lucy was too human that it shocked her so! Wasn't it the plain unvarnished truth that all catastrophes were merely given with these little trivial wonderings and surmises? Lucy merely gave utterance to the thoughts which most people did not acknowledge. One did remember the servants, and worry about meals, and one did even feel hungry. She felt hungry herself at this very moment! Hungry, she thought, and at the same time, rather sick. . . . A curious mixture.

And there was, undoubtedly, just plain awkward embarrassment in not knowing how to react to a quiet commonplace woman whom one had referred to, only yesterday, as "poor Gerda" and who was now, presumably, shortly to be standing in the dock accused of murder.

"These things happen to other people," thought Midge. "They can't happen to us."

She looked across the room at Edward. They oughtn't, she thought, to happen to people like Edward. People who are so very unviolent. . . . She took comfort in looking at Edward. Edward, so quiet, so reasonable, so kind and calm.

Gudgeon entered, inclined himself confidentially, and spoke in a suitably muted voice.

"I have placed sandwiches and some coffee in the dining room, m'lady."

"Oh, thank you, Gudgeon!" said Lady Angkatell as Gudgeon left the room. "Gudgeon is wonderful! I don't know what I should do without Gudgeon. He always knows the right thing to do. Some really substantial sandwiches are as good as lunch—and nothing heartless about them if you know what I mean!"

"Oh, Lucy, don't. . . ."

Midge suddenly felt warm tears running down her cheeks. Lady Angkatell looked surprised, murmured:

"Poor darling. It's all been too much for you."

Edward crossed to the sofa and sat down by Midge. He put his arm around her.

"Don't worry, little Midge," he said. Midge buried her face on his shoulder and sobbed there comfortably. She remembered how nice Edward had been to her when her rabbit had died at Ainswick one Easter holiday.

Edward said gently, "It's been a shock. Can I get her some brandy, Lucy?"

"On the sideboard in the dining room. I don't think—"

She broke off as Henrietta came into the room. Midge sat up. She felt Edward stiffen and sit very still.

What, thought Midge, does Henrietta feel? She felt almost reluctant to look at her cousin—but there was nothing to see. Henrietta looked, if anything, belligerent. She had come in with her chin up, her color high, and with a certain swiftiness.

"Oh, there you are, Henrietta," cried Lady Angkatell. "I have been wondering. The police are with Henry and M. Poirot. What have you given Gerda? Brandy? Or tea and an aspirin?"

"I gave her some brandy—and a hot water bottle."

"Quite right," said Lady Angkatell approvingly. "That's what they tell you in First Aid classes—the hot water bottle, I mean, for shock—not the brandy; there is a reaction nowadays against stimulants. But I think that is only a fashion. We always gave brandy for shock when I was a girl at Ainswick. Though, really, I suppose, it can't be exactly shock what one would feel if one had killed one's husband—it's the sort of thing one just can't begin to imagine—but it wouldn't exactly give one a shock. I mean there wouldn't be any element of surprise."

Henrietta's voice, icy cold, cut into the placid atmosphere.

She said, "Why are you all so sure that Gerda killed John?"

There was a moment's pause—and Midge felt a curious shifting in the atmosphere—there was confusion, strain and, finally, a kind of slow watchfulness.

Then Lady Angkatell said, her voice quite devoid of any infection:

"It seemed—self-evident. What else do you suggest?"

"Isn't it possible that Gerda came along to the pool, that she found John—lying there, and that she had just picked up the revolver when—when we came upon the scene?"

Again there was that silence. Then Lady Angkatell asked:

"Is that what Gerda says?"

"Yes."

down-drooping, pessimistic mustache. "This is my wife—Inspector Grange."

Grange bowed and said: "I was wondering, Lady Angkatell, if I could have a few words with Mrs. Christow."

He broke off as Lady Angkatell indicated the figure on the sofa, "Mrs. Christow?"

Gerda said eagerly: "Yes, I am Mrs. Christow."

"I don't want to distress you, Mrs. Christow, but I would like to ask you a few questions. You can, of course, have your solicitor present if you prefer it—"

Sir Henry put in: "It is sometimes wiser, Gerda—"

She interrupted: "A solicitor? Why a solicitor? Why should a solicitor know anything about John's death?"

Inspector Grange coughed. Sir Henry seemed about to speak, Henrietta put in:

"The inspector only wants to know just what happened this morning."

Gerda turned to him. She spoke in a wondering voice: "It seems all like a dream—not real. I—I haven't been able to cry or anything. One just doesn't feel anything at all."

Grange said soothingly: "That's the shock, Mrs. Christow."

"Yes, yes—I suppose it is. . . . But you see it was all so sudden. I went out from the house and along the path to the swimming pool—"

"At what time, Mrs. Christow?"

"It was just before one o'clock—about two minutes to one I know, because I looked at that clock. And when I got there—there was John, lying there—and blood on the edge of the concrete."

"Did you hear a shot, Mrs. Christow?"

"Yes—no—I don't know. I knew Sir Henry and Mr. Angkatell were out shooting. . . . I—I just saw John—"

"Yes, Mrs. Christow?"

"John—and blood—and a revolver. I picked up the revolver—"

"Why?"

"I beg your pardon?"

"Why did you pick up the revolver, Mrs. Christow?"

"I—I don't know."

"You shouldn't have touched it, you know."

"Shouldn't I?" Gerda was vague, her face vacant. "But I did. I held it in my hand."

She looked down now at her hands as though she was, in fancy, seeing the revolver lying in them.

She turned sharply to the inspector. Her voice was suddenly sharp—angry.

"Who could have killed John? Nobody could have wanted to kill him. He was—he was the best of men. So kind, so unselfish—he did everything for other people. Everybody loved him, Inspector. He was a wonderful doctor. The best and kindest of husbands. It must have been an accident—it must—it must!"

She flung out a hand to the room.

"Ask anyone, Inspector. Nobody could have wanted to kill John, could they?"

She appealed to them all.

Inspector Grange closed up his notebook.

"Thank you, Mrs. Christow," he said in an unemotional voice. "That will be all for the present."

Inside WASHINGTON

Eisenhower Rejects Bids As Corporation Director | White House Party Guest Thinks Mrs. Truman 'Bored'

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is having quite a headache these days—one that almost any other person in the country would welcome, but not "Ike."

Here is his trouble: A great number of American corporations and business houses want the name of the Army chief of staff and supreme Allied commander on their board of directors.

By adroitly worded and persuasive letters and by personal calls, the general is being solicited to join this or that board. He would draw all the emoluments that go with the titles. It is emphasized that he would have little to do, but all the firms know what his name would mean to their business.

Ike, however, is remaining steadfastly aloof from these inducements. He will accept none. The general has no plans except to continue for a while as chief of staff and then assume the presidency of Columbia university about Jan. 1.

Education gains Eisenhower and his great administrative and leadership qualities, but the glistening mahogany board tables of industry directorships will not cover the feet of the five-star general. But it's a headache just to keep on saying "No."

GOVERNMENT GAL PANS A PARTY—Rep. Errett Scrivner (R), Kansas, recently asked Doris Bocooc, of Olathe, Kan., one of the government girls invited to Mrs. Truman's garden party, to write about her White House experiences in his weekly news letter. Here are some excerpts from Doris' article:

"I had been excited about this event for over a month—but did my illusions get knocked for a loop. In the first place, the weather clouded up and the party was held inside the White House rather than on the lawn as originally planned."

"Mrs. Truman wore a very attractive gray and yellow print dress, and if there was any feeling reflected in her face, it was that of boredom—as though she were thinking, 'Well, since I'm the president's wife, this is one of the things I have to do.'"

Doris concluded her article with this observation: "Despite the fact that the papers called it a delightful affair, I'll take a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich at the corner drugstore any time. But—I wouldn't have missed it for anything."

COCKTAILS "TORPEDOED"—The Securities Exchange commission intervened to halt what was planned as one of the gaudiest cocktail parties in Washington history.

Preston Tucker, whose production of the Tucker Torpedo automobile was made possible by a Reconstruction Finance Corp. loan, was to have been host at the gala soiree.

The occasion was to have marked the "unveiling" of the Torpedo, and invitations were telegraphed to thousands of Washingtonians, including the entire capital press.

But the telegraphic bids were quickly followed by wires stating that the party had been called off because of "illness in the Tucker family."

It soon became known, however, that it wasn't illness but the SEC which interfered with the event.

The SEC informed Tucker that it would not countenance such an ostentatious bid for publicity.

Tucker thereupon decided to exhibit the car "privately." Invitations were tendered by telephone this time and it was made plain that the showing would not include free drinks, free food, or free anything else, except a free look at the Torpedo.

BAKED FISH MOUSSE

BY BETTY NEWTON

So the girls are coming in for lunch and bridge. Of course you want something extra special! Get everyone in a party mood by serving a first course of fresh fruit.

The baked fish mousse makes a hearty main dish and may be served with a variety of sauces, such as the sour cream sauce suggested. It is "different" and the flavor combines well with the fish. Surrounded with fresh buttered asparagus, the mousse makes a most attractive dish to be served at the table.

Lemon meringue tarts provide a gala but not too heavy dessert. They may be prepared well ahead of time, and require no last minute touches.

Baked Fish Mousse
1½ lbs. fresh fish fillets
1 lemon
1 onion
Parsley
1 bay leaf
1 C. chopped toasted almonds
1 C. cream
¼ C. fine cracker crumbs
¼ C. melted butter or margarine
2 Tbsp. grated onion
¼ C. lemon juice
6 egg yolks
6 egg whites
Salt and pepper

Poach the fish in water with lemon, onion, parsley, bay leaf, salt and pepper. Drain the fish and flake it, when cool. To the fish add all the other ingredients except the eggs. Mash the fish mixture and beat with a spoon. Beat egg yolks and fold in. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold in last. Fill a greased loaf pan with the mixture and pat down smooth. Cover with greased brown paper and tie it over the top. Set in a pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees until set and firm, about 1 hour. Loosen around the edges with a spatula and turn out on a hot platter. Serve hot with sour cream sauce.

Sour Cream Sauce

2 Tbsp. butter
2 Tbsp. flour
½ C. milk
1 C. thick sour cream
Minced chives, onion, or parsley
Paprika
Salt and pepper

Melt butter in saucepan. Blend in flour; when smooth add milk. Cook until smooth and thick. Just before serving add sour cream. Add chives, onion or parsley, and a dash of paprika. Stir constantly until just heated through. Keep flame low or sauce will curdle. Season with salt and pepper.

Lemon Meringue Tarts

1½ C. sugar
¼ C. cornstarch
¼ C. flour
1½ C. boiling water
4 egg yolks
2 Tbsp. lemon rind
½ C. lemon juice
2 Tbsp. butter
Baked tart shells
Meringue

Mix dry ingredients. Add boiling water gradually and stir constantly until mixture boils. Place over bottom of double boiler and cook 20 minutes longer, stirring constantly. Slowly pour mixture over egg yolks, return to double boiler and cook 2 minutes longer. Add butter, rind, and juice. Cool filling and baked tart shells. Add filling to shells and spread with meringue. Bake at 350 degrees until meringue is browned.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

The military men with whom I talk, seem to think the threat now, at this stage of developments, implies a Russian chance to create some limited chaos in this country by sudden missile attack, accompanied by domestic Communist uprisings, but suggests that invasion would be out of the question. They see a threat of terror against us, maybe, but no possibility of conquest. They think public awakening to this threat may have been overdone (witness our aerial panic sensitivity) because Russia would have to control a great stock of missiles capable of maintaining sustained attack, many thousands of airplanes for invasion, and a system of supply which would defy all efficiency experts. (Airfields would have to be seized progressively advancing toward the point of attack, and these (as well as missile launching bases), would have to be maintained against counter-attack.) The gasoline problem alone would create a deterrent which Russia could hardly be expected to meet with existing supplies.

Such an attack would necessarily fail if it even gave time for successful counterattack. Missile launching areas would be subject to airplane attack and missile destruction. Russian oil is limited and vulnerable. Defensive services have explored possibilities of creating an airscreen north of us in Canada to blunt the effectiveness of missile flights, throwing them off mark or destroying them. The whole attack would require catastrophic destruction of such swift, devastating scope as to raise sound questions about when, if ever, the Russians would be capable of it.

On the other hand the Russians, far from being isolated militarily behind an iron curtain, are weak and openly susceptible to counterattack. A factual exposure of their unnoticed and unadvertised condition will be carried in a subsequent column, showing their iron curtain to be tissue paper from their defense standpoint.

COLONELS TRY TO CUT LEAD; BIRDS TROUNCED

By International News Service
 Louisville's second place Colonels were struggling today to turn the American Association pennant race into at least a two-team affair.

The defending league champs picked up a game on league leading Kansas City last night by winning the first game of a series with the Blues, 6 to 4. The Colonels scored four runs in the ninth to break a two-all deadlock then had to sweat out a futile Kansas City comeback.

Earl Tootson won over Fred Bradley, registering Bradley's third defeat against 11 victories. The win left the Colonels three and a half games behind the Blues.

Milwaukee went ten innings to defeat Indianapolis, 2 to 1. Glenn Elliott allowed six hits to defeat Glen Fletcher of the Indians, who granted eight safeties.

Last place St. Paul smashed Columbus, 11 to 5, driving Otey Clark to cover in less than seven innings. Clark and two successors gave up 14 hits including a home run by Eric Tipton. Toledo and Minneapolis were not scheduled.

REDS TO PLAY SUNDAY GAME AT GREENFIELD

Ashville Reds will go to Greenfield Sunday—if there is not too much rain—to try to strengthen their hold on first place in the South Central Ohio Baseball league.

The Reds are favored to take Greenfield easily but Manager Carl Gulick and his charges are expecting anything but an easy game. Last time the clubs met, Greenfield almost upset the league leaders and that may happen Sunday. Ashville has been having trouble winning in recent games and a defeat is not improbable.

However, the Reds will be out to show Greenfield fans the close game at Ashville was a mistake. Mark Wylie or Leonard Hornsby probably will get the starting nod with Russ Gregg and Bob Heiny ready for duty if called on.

In other SCO games Sunday Jamestown goes to Chillicothe; Washington C. H. to Lancaster and Grove City to Lancaster.

TOURNAMENT TO REPLACE LEAGUE SOFTBALL PLAY

A double-elimination tournament will replace the second round of play in the Night Softball league, it was indicated Saturday.

It was reported that at a meeting Friday night of sponsors, managers and league officials, the tournament was decided on because of the uncertainty of play due to recent rains.

The tournament is scheduled to start as soon as Ted Lewis park is ready for use again.

PEGGY KIRK WINS OHIO WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNEY

AKRON, O., July 19 — Peggy Kirk, Findlay, is a golf champion on her own today.

The 25-year-old link star won the 24th annual Ohio women's golf tournament yesterday by staging a brilliant comeback to edge Cleveland's Jean Hopkins, 2 and 1, over the Portage Country Club course.

Commented the pretty-auburn-haired link star, a former Rollins college co-ed:

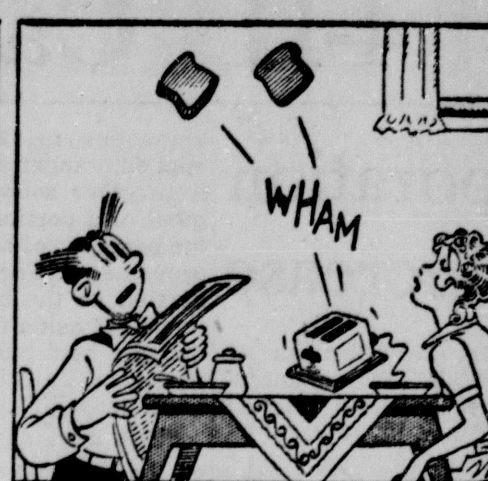

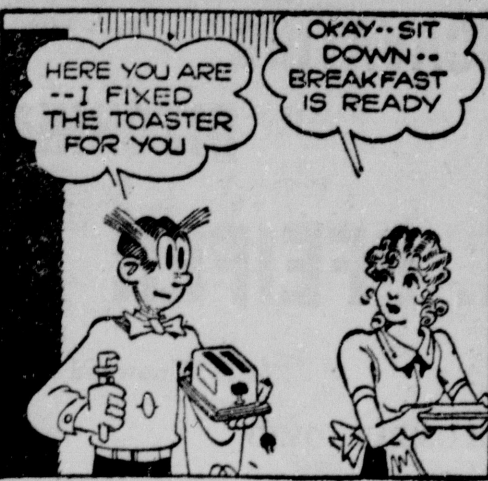

"That's the first one I've really won on my own."
 She and Joe Kirkwood won the mixed two-ball 1946 title in Orlando, Fla. Last Winter she and Mildred Didrikson Zaharias captured the international four-ball tourney.

Colonel Stoopnagle, pinch-hitting for Bob Hawk while the latter takes a vacation from his Monday night comedy quiz, couldn't find a Lemac on the broadcast this week. The jackpot prize he'll offer July 21 to the person, or persons, who answer all his questions has been hoisted to $1000!

Vaughn Monroe and his orchestra, starred on Saturday nights, now are represented by two hits in the nation's juke-boxes. Tunes are "Dreams Are a Dime a Dozen" and "Ivy".

Harry Stewart, director of "The Lassie Show", is a well-known radio comedian in his own right, famed for his characterization of "Yogi Yorgensen".

Arthur ("Dagwood") Lake, of the Sunday "Blondie" show, is co-inventor of an extension bumper that gives curb auto parkers two feet of extra "get out" space when hemmed in.

Popular singers and bandleaders are clamoring for guest spots on the Paul Whiteman Club Mondays through Fridays. Reason: Following their appearances their record averages in the nation's jukeboxes go 'way up.

Meredith Willson, star of "Showroom" show, once composed a popular song in 22 minutes, complete with lyrics and music.

William Stoess, musical director for "Greatest Story Ever Told" may soon take over the position of musical director on one of the leading independent stations.

Container Corporation Sales Show Big Increase

Net sales of the Container Corporation of America which operates a factory in Circleville increased almost 56 per cent during the first six months of 1947, it was learned Saturday, as compared with the first six months of 1946.

A financial report issued Friday from the company's Chicago, Ill. headquarters showed that the net profits during the first half of 1947 amounted to more than double the net profits during the first half of 1946.

The report said the net sales in 1947 up to July 1 totaled $63,461,921, as against $40,716,000 for the corresponding period in 1946 or an increase of 55.9 per cent. The working capital increased $766,625 and the earned surplus increased $3,428,859 since Jan. 1, 1947.

The net profits in 1947 up to June 30, the report said, totaled $3,664,068, as against a total of $2,692,551 during the first half of 1946. ## SECOND FLASH FLOOD HITS COMMUNITY

Republicans To Try For Tax Cut At Next Session

WASHINGTON, July 19—House Majority Leader Halleck (R) Ind. forecast today that the GOP majority will make "another try" for tax reductions in the next session of congress.

One Republican leader said there was even a "possibility" that the Jan. 1, 1948 tax-cut bill successfully vetoed by President Truman will be re-introduced before congress adjourns on July 26.

Mr. Truman's second tax veto in 31 days was overridden by the house but was sustained in the senate by a margin of five votes. Two senate Democrats and one Republican "switched" from support of the measure to add strength to the President's victory. The vote was 57 to 36.

REP. KNUTSON (R) Minn., chairman of the house ways and means committee said he would not re-offer his bill. But Halleck said:

"My view is that we Republicans will make another try for tax reductions in the next session of congress, and we are going to overhaul the entire hodge-podge tax code."

Sen. Millikin (R) Col., senate finance chairman, said he was "very happy with the record we made on the tax bill."

Millikin bitterly accused President Truman of not having a "decent respect" for the right of congress to control revenues. His senate speech was one of the sharpest attacks on a President since 1944 when President Roosevelt was denounced for his tax bill veto of last year.

The vehemence of Millikin's charge surprised even some of his own GOP colleagues.

PRESIDENT Truman's veto of the four billion dollar tax relief bill reached the house at noon Friday. That body promptly voted 299 to 108—27 more votes than needed—to override the veto.

Sent at once to the senate, the vetoed bill was debated for almost 4½ hours with Republicans conceding their defeat in advance. On the roll call, the senate sustained the veto with three more votes than expected. A vote of 60 to 33 had been forecast.

Sens. Aiken (R) Vt., Tydings (D) Md., and Umstead (D) N. C., who voted for the GOP bill when it passed the senate Monday, shifted and upheld the President.

JOHN BRODERICK, FICTION TYPE COP, RESIGNS

NEW YORK, July 19—John J. Broderick, living counterpart of fiction's and Hollywood's better detectives, isn't going to be around to terrorize the hoods any more.

He retired last night after 25 years of service in the department during which time he virtually rewrote the book on what a strong-arm cop should be. Broderick was a man of action, preferably the two-fisted variety.

He came up to the department from the gas house district and never forgot the lessons he learned from that neighborhood of the better ways to commit mayhem.

Broderick singled out the little and big toughs alike. He could not tolerate crime in any form. He preferred to work alone and when possible without his gun.

OFFICIAL SEES FURTHER RISE IN LIVING COST

BLS Index Indicates U. S. Near Economic Goals Set By President

WASHINGTON, July 19—The nation's economic outlook today was for continued high production, record employment and a rise in the cost of living.

This was the analysis of Ewan Clague, commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics, who reported that "downward pressures" of last Spring have been eased.

Clague forecast continuance of civilian employment at the present record-breaking level of slightly over 60 million jobs through September and said it "may go even higher" in the Summer months.

A decline is foreseen in the Fall when agricultural work drops off and students return to the classroom.

THE BLS official said a "favorable aspect" of the present picture is the capacity output of steel and coal which assures continuous availability of basic raw materials. He said production stability and efficiency should improve as a result.

Clague indicated that the coal price increase resulting from the recent wage boosts to John L. Lewis' half million miners will not materially affect the cost of living. Coal accounts for only 2.1 percent of the BLS index.

However, recent sharp gains in some food prices and forthcoming rent increases probably will send the cost-of-living barometer to a new peak within the next few months.

THE COST of living index reached its previous peak last March at 156.3 percent of the 1939 level and then declined to 155.8 in May.

The BLS commissioner reported that the nation has "hit or is close to" the economic goals fixed by President Truman for attainment during 1947.

Average weekly earnings among more than 13 million manufacturing workers rose to a new peak of $48.91 in June and the full effect of the recent 15-cent-hourly "pattern" increases has not been fully felt.

Clague said wages now are double pre-war levels, but when higher prices are taken into account, national purchasing power is up only 29 percent.

Another bright spot in the current economic picture is the unexpected gain in housing construction during June. About 75,000 new permanent dwelling units were started last month, a new postwar peak and a gain of 2,500 over May.

FLOOD DAMAGE IN THREE STATES IS $900,000,000

MILWAUKEE, July 19—Flood and storm damage to crops and soil in Iowa, Missouri and Illinois during May and June was fixed at 900 million dollars today by the U. S. soil conservation service.

ROMANIANS SAY PEOPLE FAVOR MARSHALL PLAN

PARIS, July 19—A group of Romanian statesmen in exile declared today that their country and all eastern Europe support the Marshall plan but outside pressure prevents them from participating.

In a note to the 16 nations co-operating in the plan for European economic cooperation, the exiles, headed by former minister of foreign affairs Grigore Gafencu, said:

"The official Romania that refused to participate in the Paris conference is not the real Romania. The government imposed on the nation has been compelled once more to act against the will of the Romanian people."

The group of expatriates currently gathered in Paris includes Carol Dayla, former minister to Washington. Their message declared that official Romanian decisions have been manifestly harmful to the country.

SOLON CHARGES SUPER MILITARY SETUP PLANNED

Hoffman Fights Armed Forces Merger Bill; House In Special Meeting

WASHINGTON, July 19—Rep. Hoffman (R) Mich., co-sponsor of the Army-Navy unification bill, today charged that an attempt is being made to establish a "super military organization."

Hoffman made his assertion as the house opened debate on the senate-approved legislation.

The congressman charged: "Because of the fear brought about by propaganda, the military seeks, and apparently will be successful, to abdicate its authority, to shirk its responsibility, and turn over to the joint chiefs of staff, to a super military organization imposed upon our armed forces, the duty of providing a national defense."

THE CHAIRMAN of the house executive expenditures committee, which revised slightly the senate bill creating a single national military establishment, declared he would vote for the measure because congress was going to adopt unification legislation. The committee bill, he said, was the "least harmful."

Hoffman asserted he sponsored the administration merely as an official duty.

As further indication of his dislike for the bill bearing his name, the congressman turned over to Rep. Wadsworth (R) N. Y., a committee member and long-time exponent of Army-Navy unification, the task of (Continued on Page Two)

BRITISH SHIPS IN GREEK PORT; 'WAR' GOES ON

ATHENS, July 19—A British naval flotilla — comprising five warships — arrived in Greek waters today as Athens government forces continued to badger decimated Communist guerrilla units in the mountains of Epirus province.

Among the vessels of the British Mediterranean fleet which dropped anchor in Phaleron bay, easternmost of the harbors of Athens, was the flagship H. M. S. Liverpool. It was accompanied by four escorting craft.

In northwestern Greece, meanwhile, Greek government troops continued attempts to again encircle elements of the guerrilla force which — Athens official insisted — came from the Soviet satellite of Albania.

Low-flying aircraft again strafed the split-up rebel units which apparently were trying to regroup in the mountains between Ioannina and Konitsa — two prime objectives of their abortive assault earlier in the week.

To Cabinet

KENNETH C. ROYALL, assistant secretary of war, receives congratulatory messages upon announcement by President Truman of his appointment to succeed Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. Effective July 24, Patterson's resignation comes on eve of house consideration of Army-Navy unification bill.

FORRESTAL TO HEAD DEFENSE

Resignation Of Patterson Insures New Post For Navy Secretary

WASHINGTON, July 19—The resignation of Secretary of War Patterson insured today the appointment of Navy Secretary Forrestal as the nation's first secretary of national defense.

Patterson resigned Friday, on the eve of house consideration of the senate-approved Army-Navy unification bill. President Truman immediately named Undersecretary of War Kenneth C. Royall to succeed him.

Informed sources repeatedly have forecast that the President would designate Forrestal as secretary of national defense.

IT WAS A foregone conclusion that Patterson would step out before Mr. Truman named Forrestal. Otherwise, by continuing as secretary of war, Patterson would have to serve under a man who had been his junior in the cabinet.

The unification bill, which virtually is certain to win congressional approval, provides for a single secretary of national defense to head the armed services with subordinate secretaries of war, navy and air force.

The appointment of Royall marked the peak in the meteoric rise of the North Carolina lawyer from an Army colonel to civilian (Continued on Page Two)

MILITARY TRAINING BILL FAVORED BY COMMITTEE

HARGUS CREEK FLOODS PARK, EAST END AREAS

Carperville Threatened By Water Again; Bridge Work Delayed

Many Circleville area residents scanned the skies Saturday in apprehension of more damaging rains and thunder storms following Friday afternoon's deluge. Unpredicted rain which sent Hominy, Hargus and Scippo creeks on the rampage for the second time in five days and added to the damage done by the disastrous near-cloudburst Monday night.

The waters of Scippo creek overflowed the banks of that stream, flowed over U. S. Route 23, south of Circleville, and inundated a section of the Kingston pike southeast of Circleville.

Four miles from Circleville, Pickaway County Engineer Henry T. McCrady said, a half-mile stretch of the Kingston pike was under one to one and one-half feet of water from Scippo creek for several hours. However, the flood waters had subsided Saturday morning.

RESIDENTS in the Carperville section at the east edge of Circleville, remembering the necessitated flight from their homes when flood waters of Hargus creek flooded that section, Friday night made hurried preparations to flee for a second time but, luckily, the overflow from the stream was insufficient to cause serious damage. Water covered a section of Watt street and nearby lanes.

The water did, however, carry away the temporary foot-bridge which had been erected on State Route 22 to accommodate pedestrians after Monday night's flood waters caused the collapse of the 63-year old bridge over Hargus creek. Engineer McCrady said (Continued on Page Two)

LAUSCHE STEPS IN CONTROVERSY ON LIQUOR STOCK

CLEVELAND, July 19—Former Gov. Frank J. Lausche stepped into the controversy today over the state liquor department's inventory.

Maintaining that he "was not the purchasing agent" and could not keep up with detailed transactions in the department, the former chief executive defended himself by quoting two sets of figures.

When he took office, Lausche said, brandy and rum and two slow-moving liquors comprised more than 69 per cent of the entire inventory. That figure has come down to 13 per cent, he added.

The former governor also said that during his administration the total inventory rose about $6,000,000.

"I want to point out," Lausche said, "that there was only 23 per cent of whisky on hand when I took office but 69 per cent of rum and brandy."

"There was approximately 32 times more rum in the inventory than the normal percentage requires. There was 68 times more brandy than the normal inventory requires."

Lausche said that it was regrettable that "an effort has been made to mislead the public in making a comparison of the inventory of January, 1947, and January, 1941."

He added that the public would "have to guess" why the present liquor director, Dale Dunifon, who made the 1941 and 1947 comparisons, omitted the two-year periods of 1943 and 1945.

BABY DROWNS

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 19—Scioto county coroner Virgil Fowler returned a verdict of accidental drowning today in the death of 18-months-old Aletta Jean Litz. The child's body was found by her father, Earl Litz, in a stream near their farm home 15 miles northeast of Portsmouth.

HARGUS CREEK FLOODS PARK, EAST END AREAS

the foot-bridge will be replaced as quickly as possible.

THE COUNTY engineer said Saturday that the high waters Friday night virtually destroyed the repair work done during the past four days by county road crews in the "Devil's Backbone" area. The work had been made necessary by Monday night's flood.

Swirling high waters of Hargus creek Friday night washed away sufficient soil to cause a large sycamore tree on the rear of the property occupied by George Crum, East Water street, near the North Court street bridge over the creek to topple into the creek. The fallen tree dammed the flow of the water. Policemen toiled from 10:30 p. m. until 1 a. m. Saturday, saving the tree, to eliminate this dam.

Charles Carter, Circleville weather observer, reported that the rainfall measured .85 of one inch, and the Scioto river level was 6.63 feet at 8 a. m. Saturday. The high temperature reading Friday was 82 degrees, the low was 65, and the thermometer registered 66 at 8 a. m. Friday.

The official weather forecast indicated cloudy and cooler weather for Saturday and Sunday. Heavily overcast skies Saturday morning gave strong hint of additional rain.

Considerable overflow from Hargus creek spread over Ted Lewis park Friday afternoon, adding to the damage caused by Monday night's storm.

U. S. CHECKING ON AMERICANS HELD BY RUSSIA

BOSTON, July 19—The United States government, in response to a flood of protests from Massachusetts residents, took steps today to assist two former Worcester mothers reported imprisoned with their six children in Siberian collectivist camps by the Russian government.

An official of the state department announced that the U. S. embassy in Moscow has been directed to make a full report on Mrs. Valdemaras Carneckis, 48, the former Eleanor Schultz, and her five children. Carneckis, police charge d'affairs in Washington in 1923, was premier of Poland at the outbreak of World War II.

The department also is looking into the case of the former Anna M. Migastkas, who married Stanley Kairukstis, who was then Lithuanian minister of education. They have a 15-year-old daughter.

Claims that a third Worcester woman was being held prisoner by the Soviets despite American citizenry, brought from the state department the statement that "she has no claim to American citizenship."

Anthony O. Shallna, Lithuanian consul in Boston, said Mrs. Isabel Gustais, the former Isabel Avetian of Worcester, and her two children are held prisoners. The state department said Mrs. Gustais left the United States in 1921 as a single woman and voluntarily renounced her American citizenship in Kanaus, Lithuania, in 1928 following her marriage.

SOLOM CHARGES SUPER MILITARY SETUP PLANNED

opening debate on the legislation.

Hoffman advised newsmen that later in the day he will probably give the house "some inside history as to the procedure used to get the bill out of committee."

GOP LEADERSHIP called the house into an unusual 10 a. m. Saturday session in an effort to complete action on the bill, the last major piece of "must" legislation to come before the house prior to the scheduled adjournment of the congress next Saturday.

Wadsworth scouted Hoffman's fears that the military would receive undue power. He maintained that "all through the set-up civilians prevail." Wadsworth told the house:

"Here we have a piece of machinery that should work. During the war we saw all sorts of devices resorted to in great haste."

Hoffman reiterated charges that the Navy was "gagged" and forced to accept the legislation, which he termed "the culmination of over 25 years of effort by military elements to gain greater power within the government."

He charged that the present bill "originated in the war department" and represented "a total abdication by congress of its authority over the armed forces."

'A Religious Landmark'

Job Faces Problem of Suffering

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

The International Union Lesson on the above topic for July 20 is Job 1-6:3-26; 13:15, 19, 21-26; 23:1-6; 42; James 5:11, the Memory Verse being Ephesians 4:32, "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other."

THE STORY of Satan's cynical remark to the Lord about Job, who, he said, would not continue his faith in God if he lost his riches and was greatly afflicted, was told in this column two weeks ago to explain how it happened that these trials came upon him.

The whole problem of how evil came into the world and why some people who are wicked prosper and others who lead exemplary lives are the prey of misfortune, is discussed but not determined, unless it is by the assumption that suffering often is a purifier for those who take their trials in the spirit of Job, although even he became very melancholy and felt deserted—as who wouldn't, with all his afflictions?

In the first place, Satan was told he might afflict Job by taking away his material possessions and even his children, but that his person was not to be touched. After the various messengers told him that first his oxen, plowing in the field, and his asses, had been taken by the Sabeans and the servants tending them killed, except the one messenger who escaped, that first his oxen and his asses had been killed by the Chaldeans had carried off the camels, and worst of all, that his sons and daughters had been killed when a strong wind crashed their house down upon them, Job "rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped. And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly."

Satan suggests another affliction. When God called Satan's attention to Job's trust and loyalty after these disasters, Satan bravely suggested, "put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse Thee to Thy face."

"Behold, he is in thine hand," the Lord answered, "but save his life." So Job was afflicted with "sore boils from the sole of his foot unto his crown." At this Job's wife said to him, "Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die." This is the only mention we have of his wife, and she certainly did nothing to uphold and comfort him. Job, however, answered her, "Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?"

Three of Job's friends came to comfort and mourn with him, Eliphaz, the Temanite, Bildad, the Shuhite, and Zophar, the Naamathite. At first they sat silent, and "none spake a word unto him, for they saw that his grief was very great." There are a number of chapters devoted to their discourses, their theory being that Job must have sinned, and that these troubles came upon him as punishment. Job disagreed with them and told them so.

Suffering unspeakably in mind and body, Job "opened his mouth and cursed his day." He wished that he had died when he was born. "For now should I have lain still and been quiet. I should have slept; then had I been at rest."

As the three friends argued with him, insisting that he must have done evil to account for his plight, Job lost patience, saying, "Hold your peace, let me alone, that I may speak, and let come on me what will," following this with a sublime expression of faith in God. "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him: but I will maintain mine own ways before Him."

The Lord Talks to Job

Finally, out of the whirlwind came the voice of the Lord to this suffering man, telling him of the extent and wonder of the world and all that it contains, and showing him how he, Job, is only a tiny part of it all. Job acknowledged the greatness of Jehovah. "I know that Thou canst do all things, and that no purpose of Thine can be restrained."

The Lord rebuked Job's three friends and told them to offer sacrifices for their salvation; and He told Job to pray for them, which he did. Then Job was rewarded for all his suffering by being given "twice as much as he had before." His relatives and old friends who had forsaken him in his adversity, probably thinking, like the three friends, that he had been wicked and was being punished, flocked to his home to eat and drink with him, and to bring him gifts.

Seven more sons and three beautiful daughters were born to him, and he lived to a very great age. Our last reference is to James 5:11, "Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful and of tender mercy."

The old Jamestown church, founded by early American settlers, is a religious shrine for visitors to the South. It is one of the famous churches of Virginia. But it is more than that. It is an inspiration to free people everywhere.

Within its walls, early settlers meditated and prayed for solution of problems that beset them and which at times seemed onerous. Their problems found solution and their souls peace within the inspiring setting of this beautiful old church, for God was always there dwelling among them, blessing them and their lives.

About this church nature finds its most beautiful expression. Ivy grows, trees branch out and bud. Shade cools the summer visitors to Jamestown's shrine. Here, too, the seasons wax and wane. Shower and sunshine visit Jamestown, just as they do any other community. People here also are born and die.

The church is the anchor of civilization. Denominations are man made, but the church was established by God. Down through the ages, man has felt the need of a higher power when misfortune befell him. He found surcease to his grief within his church.

When we look upon the Jamestown church, or upon any church, it is well to reflect that the real beauty of the edifice lies not so much in its architecture, but within its interior, where the lives of its members have been glorified and beautified. The church as an institution has set many a man's foot back onto the right path, and has sent him forth to glorify God. Go to church next Sunday. You will find within a beauty and satisfaction that never showed up on its exterior.

BACK TO THE KITCHEN

IT WILL BE news to many that for 13 years a society has existed in England which has had for its purpose the driving of women back to kitchens and nurseries. Its aim, as implied by its title, The Anti-Woman Society, might even go so far as to do away with the fair sex altogether. Fred Workmull, founder and leader of this ambitious organization, has accused women of stealing men's jobs and ruining their morals.

A recent dispatch from London, however, announces that this enemy of half of society has been married for two months. Perhaps, after thirteen years of effort in behalf of a cause which was lost before it was undertaken, he decided to give the whole thing up and take over the care and support of one of the hated sex. His capitulation is thorough and complete.

It would be interesting to interview Fred in a couple of years and get his reactions to the married state. He might, depending on the woman he married, find that love for one woman has mellowed him to the point of benevolence toward all her sex; and on the other hand, he may have rejoined the ranks of the woman-haters.

But trying to turn the clock back never works very well. It keeps people looking back, not forward. It's better to take the new things in stride. Let the women work outside if need be, but keep before them the principle that caring for the family comes first. The new labor-savers have given women leisure that the grandmothers never knew. Sometimes it's better to use this leisure working than idling, and sometimes it's necessary for the mother to work outside the home. The question is not how she manages to care for the home but how well. If she does it well, what matter how? If not, let her learn. But let's go forward with home care, not back.

FAIR-MINDED EMPLOYERS

EDWIN A. LAHEY, reporting the activities of the academic sessions of the fourth annual race relations institute at Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., says that social workers and a few labor leaders get credit for any progress made in the fight against race discrimination in industry. The truth is, he says, that most steps have been taken by industry itself.

Mentioning especially the International Harvester Company of Chicago as having an enlightened hiring policy, he also named the Ford Motor Company, Aluminum Company of America, Western Electric, Willard Storage Battery and several others. A speaker from International Harvester advocated a firm alliance between employer and union in taking down bars formerly preventing hiring of Negro help.

Perhaps the time will come, not too far hence, when all employment can be based on individual merit, experience and fitness for the job. It is heartening to learn that a start has been made in this direction.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 19—In this era of flying discs, top General Eisenhower says this nation must guard itself well against insane attack, and congress is getting on with it. The long overdue bill unifying the Army, Navy and Air Corps has been set up for enactment. The Navy first negotiated assurance that its appropriations and activities will be rather fully continued. Hence the bill will not save much money. National defense appropriations for this fiscal year will run nearly $10,000,000,000. Even military men are beginning to become wary of themselves spending so much. State Secretary Marshall has pointed out soldiers ordinarily have not had much business experience, and should devote some effort to reducing their costs. Possibly a better guard against insane attack might be erected for a few hundred million rather than all those billions, certain congressmen have been muttering.

But the unification, which will eliminate some duplication, is being pushed forward finally now by the Republicans in a mild form agreeable to the heroes of the war (Eisenhower and Nimitz, for instance). It is a loose unification, but you will soon be calling the martial departments by their new name "national defense establishment". Changes from the original bill mainly involve legal rewording of preserve the status of naval aviation, the Marine corps and the administrative functions of routine bureaus which feared being sidetracked.

Final report of Chairman Gurney's armed services committee says "the world is entering an era in which war, if it comes, will be fought at speeds and accompanied by devastations that stagger the imagination." For this, the bill sets up a single overall secretary, three undersecretaries for land, sea and air, a council of national defense (under the president), a national security resources board, the joint chiefs of staff, a central intelligence agency (later three already operating), a procurement agency and research agency. It does not abolish much, but unifies what already exists.

Frankly, certain congressional people doubt that this will do, but are saying little yet. All defense activities have been glorified by the indefinite but awful possibilities of atomic attack of directed air missiles. Defense talk has been almost entirely centered in these incalculable prospects, without getting down to cases. The atmosphere is fraught with flying questions and unclarified.

The only current possibility of attack would come from Russia. The Russian military situation, when measured against the United States, has many definite limitations. Military writers assume a missile attack would be launched across the Polar-Alaskan spaces at our industrial nerve centers (Michigan, Illinois, Ohio) to be followed by invasion from an airborne army. Much weather comes that way. Theoretically this might all be done in a few days with efficient organization, but the Russians have displayed no aptitude for organization, comparable for instance, to Nazi efficiency.

More and more, women seem to dress and act like men, and it makes a fellow sort of wonder what the final result will be.

What good is it to have "crack trains" and "crack planes", if so many of them crack up?

LAFF-A-DAY

"You've got to know how to spell a word to look it up to find out how to spell it!"

DIET AND HEALTH

Prevention of Trichinosis

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PREVENTION of trichinosis is so easy that it is a pity for anybody to contract it. And, yet, this condition, which at best means a long, unpleasant illness, occurs fairly often, simply because people are not careful enough about cooking pork thoroughly.

Trichinosis comes almost entirely from the eating of pork infested with the parasite known as Trichinella spiralis. Either long and thorough cooking, or freezing at zero degrees Fahrenheit for 72 hours will kill all parasites. But unless the housewife knows the exact conditions under which the meat has been frozen, she will do better to play safe and cook all pork until the last tinge of pink has disappeared.

Symptoms of Trichinosis
The symptoms of trichinosis have been studied by Dr. Robert E. Ober, of Massachusetts.

Within three to five days after eating contaminated pork, such symptoms as sickness to the stomach, vomiting, pain in the abdomen, and diarrhea may develop. In this stage of the condition, the disorder is sometimes mistaken for an attack of grippe, acute kidney inflammation, rheumatic fever, or food poisoning.

In many instances, if disturbances of the stomach or bowel occur, a diagnosis of trichinosis is not made until later, because the symptoms are much like those of various abdominal disorders. The larvae are carried to the small blood vessels in the lung, to the heart, and the arteries in other parts of the body. They also pass into the eyelids, the diaphragm between the chest and abdomen, and the various muscles of the body. The worms then become encysted within the muscles and remain alive for many years. Encysted means that the worms are surrounded by a membrane or capsule.

Aching Muscles
Within ten to fourteen days after eating contaminated pork, if no stomach or bowel symptoms have occurred, the infestation may be shown by aching or tenderness in the muscles, chills, cough, swelling of the eyelids and a skin rash. Fever develops and may reach 105 Fahrenheit. These symptoms may continue for from five to seven weeks.

As a general rule, there is an increase in the number of white cells in the blood, and the kind of white cells known as eosinophils are also increased in number.

Complete recovery ordinarily occurs, but pains in the various muscles may sometimes persist for a long time.

Unfortunately, there does not seem to be any treatment of this condition which is of any particular value. However, the disorder can be prevented if all pork is either thoroughly cooked or frozen.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, July 19

The outstanding auspices are for a very direct and concentrated marshalling of the forces, energies, and resources of every kind, upon the solid establishment of ambitious projects on a sound and enduring basis. There may be obstacles, delays and various aspects of limitation or interference, but these are likely to be vanquished by hard work, patience, initiative, thrift, and also the keen understanding of hidden factors. Intrigue, shrewdness and subtle manipulation of exceptional factors should have sound results.

Birthday Forecast
Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which their own personal application, vision, understanding and highly focused energies and abilities should unite to meet and overcome certain stubborn obstacles, congestions, delays and other impediments, not only by main force but also by well-directed strategies. The wisdom, astuteness, sagacity and determination with which all opposing factors are met, should combine to bring enduring and long-term progress and success. Shun excess, extravagance and false values.

by Agatha Christie

CHAPTER TWENTY
LADY ANGKATELL sighed. "Of course, say what you like, a murder is an awkward thing—it upsets the servants and puts the general routine out—we were having ducks for lunch—fortunately they are quite nice eaten cold. . . . What does one do about Gerda, do you think? Something on a tray? A little strong soup, perhaps?"
Really, thought Midge, Lucy is inhuman! And then with a quail she reflected that it was perhaps because Lucy was too human that it shocked her so! Wasn't that all? The plain unvarnished truth that all cataphores were hedged round with these little trivial wonderings and surmises? Lucy merely gave utterance to the thoughts which most people did not acknowledge. One did remember the servants, and worry about meals, and one did even feel hungry. She felt hungry herself at this very moment! Hungry, she thought, and at the same time rather sick. . . . A curious mixture.
And there was, undoubtedly, just plain awkward embarrassment in not knowing how to react to a quiet commonplace woman whom one had referred to, only yesterday, as "poor Gerda" and who was now, presumably, shortly to be standing in the dock accused of murder.
These things happen to other people," thought Midge. "They can't happen to us."
She looked across the room at Edward. They oughtn't, she thought, to happen to people like Edward. People who are so very unviolent. . . . She took comfort in looking at Edward. Edward, so quiet, so reasonable, so kind and calm.
Gudgeon entered, inclined himself confidentially, and spoke in a suitably placed voice.
"I have placed sandwiches and some coffee in the dining room, m'lady."
"Oh, thank you, Gudgeon!"
"Really," said Lady Angkatell as Gudgeon left the room. "Gudgeon is wonderful. I don't know what I should do without Gudgeon. He always knows the right thing to do. Some really substantial sandwiches are as good as lunch—and nothing heartless about them if you know what I mean!"
"Oh, Lucy, don't . . ."
Midge suddenly felt warm tears running down her cheeks. Lady Angkatell looked surprised, murmured:
"Poor darling. It's all been too much for you."
Edward crossed to the sofa and sat down by Midge. He put his arm around her.
"Don't worry, little Midge," he said.
Midge buried her face on his shoulder and sobbed there comfortably. She remembered how nice Edward had been to her when her rabbit had died at Ainswick one Easter holiday.
Edward said gently, "It's been a shock. Can I get her some brandy, Lucy?"
"On the sideboard in the dining room, I don't think—"
She broke off as Henrietta came into the room. Midge sat up. She felt Edward stiffen and sit very still.
What, thought Midge, does Henrietta feel? She felt almost reluctant to look at her cousin—but there was nothing to see. Henrietta looked, if anything, belligerent. She had come in with her chin up, her color high, and with a certain swiftness.
"Oh, there you are, Henrietta," cried Lady Angkatell. "I have been wondering. The police are with Henry and M. Polrot. What have you given Gerda? Brandy? Or tea and an aspirin?"
"I gave her some brandy—and a hot water bottle."
"Quite right," said Lady Angkatell approvingly. "That's what they tell you in First Aid classes—the hot water bottle, I mean, for shock—not the brandy; there is a reaction nowadays against stimulants. But I think that is only a fashion. We always gave brandy for shock when I was a girl at Ainswick. Though, really, I suppose, it can't be exactly shock with Gerda. I don't know really what one would feel if one had killed one's husband—it's the sort of thing one just can't begin to imagine—but it wouldn't exactly give one a shock. I mean there wouldn't be any element of surprise."
Henrietta's voice, icy cold, cut into the placid atmosphere.
She said, "Why are you all so sure that Gerda killed John?"
There was a moment's pause—and Midge felt a curious shifting in the atmosphere—there was confusion, strain and, finally, a kind of slow watchfulness.
Then Lady Angkatell said, her voice quite devoid of any infection:
"It seemed—self-evident. What else do you suggest?"
"Isn't it possible that Gerda came along to the pool, that she found John—lying there, and that she had just picked up the revolver when—when we came upon the scene?"
Again there was that silence. Then Lady Angkatell asked:
"Is that what Gerda says?"
"Yes."
It was not a simple assent. It had force behind it. It came out like a revolver shot.
Lady Angkatell raised her eyebrows, then she said with apparent irrelevancy:
"There are sandwiches and coffee in the dining room."
She broke off with a little gasp as Gerda Christow came through the open door. Gerda said hurriedly and apologetically:
"I—I really didn't feel I could lie down any longer. One is—one is so terribly restless."
Lady Angkatell cried:
"You must sit down—you must sit down at once."
She displaced Midge from the sofa, and settled Gerda there, put a cushion at her back.
"You poor dear," said Lady Angkatell.
She spoke with emphasis, but the words seemed quite meaningless.
Edward walked to the window and stood there looking out.
Gerda pushed back the untidy hair from her forehead. She spoke in a worried, bewildered tone:
"I—I really am only just beginning to realize it. You know I haven't been able to feel—I still can't feel—that it's real—that John is dead." She began to shake a little. "Who can have killed him? Who can possibly have killed him?"
Lady Angkatell drew a deep breath—then she turned her head sharply. Sir Henry's door had opened. He came in, accompanied by Inspector Grange, who was a large, heavily built man with a

Eisenhower Rejects Bids As Corporation Director | White House Party Guest Thinks Mrs. Truman 'Bored'

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is having quite a headache these days—one that almost any other person in the country would welcome, but not "Ike."

Here is his trouble: A great number of American corporations and business houses want the name of the Army chief of staff and supreme Allied commander on their board of directors.

By adroitly worded and persuasive letters and by personal calls, the general is being solicited to join this or that board. He would draw all the emoluments that go with the titles. It is emphasized that he would have little to do, but all the firms know what his name would mean to their business.

Ike, however, is remaining steadfastly aloof from these inducements. He will accept none. The general has no plans except to continue for a while as chief of staff and then assume the presidency of Columbia university about Jan. 1. Education gains Eisenhower and his great administrative and leadership qualities, but the glistening mahogany board tables of industry directorships will not cover the feet of the five-star general. But it's a headache just to keep on saying "No."

GOVERNMENT GAL PANS A PARTY—Rep. Errett Scrivner (R), Kansas, recently asked Doris Bockoff, of Olathe, Kan., one of the government girls invited to Mrs. Truman's garden party, to write about her White House experiences in his weekly news letter. Here are some excerpts from Doris' article:

"I had been excited about this event for over a month—but did my illusions get knocked for a loop. In the first place, the weather clouded up and the party was held inside the White House rather than on the lawn as originally planned."

"Mrs. Truman wore a very attractive gray and yellow print dress, and if there was any feeling reflected in her face, it was that of boredom—as though she were thinking, 'Well, since I'm the president's wife, this is one of the things I have to do.'"

Doris concluded her article with this observation: "Despite the fact that the papers called it a delightful affair, I'll take a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich at the corner drugstore any time. But—I wouldn't have missed it for anything."

COCKTAILS "TORPEDOED"—The Securities Exchange commission intervened to halt what was planned as one of the gaudiest cocktail parties in Washington history.

Preston Tucker, whose production of the Tucker Torpedo automobile was made possible by a Reconstruction Finance Corp. loan, was to have been host at the gala soiree.

The occasion was to have marked the "unveiling" of the Torpedo, and invitations were telegraphed to thousands of Washingtonians, including the entire capital press corps.

But the telegraphic bids were quickly followed by wires stating that the party had been called off because of "illness in the Tucker family."

It soon became known, however, that it wasn't illness but the SEC which interfered with the event.

The SEC informed Tucker that it would not countenance such an ostentatious bid for publicity.

Tucker thereupon decided to exhibit the car "privately." Invitations were tendered by telephone this time and it was made plain that the showing would not include free drinks, free food, or free anything else, except a free look at the Torpedo.

So the girls are coming in for lunch and bridge. Of course you want something extra special! Get everyone in a party mood by serving a first course of fresh fruit.

The baked fish mousse makes a hearty main dish and may be served with a variety of sauces, such as the sour cream sauce suggested. It is "different" and the flavor combines well with the fish. Surrounded with fresh buttered asparagus, the mousse makes a most attractive dish to be served at the table.

Lemon meringue tarts provide a gala but not too heavy dessert. They may be prepared well ahead of time, and require no last minute touches.

Baked Fish Mousse
1½ lb. fresh fish fillets
1 lemon
1 onion
Parsley
1 bay leaf
1 C. chopped tomato
1 C. cream
1 C. fine cracker crumbs
¼ C. melted butter or margarine
1 Tbsp. grated onion
¼ C. lemon juice
6 egg yolks
6 egg whites
Salt and pepper

Poach the fish in water with lemon, onion, parsley, bay leaf, salt and pepper. Drain the fish and flake it, when cool. To the fish add all the other ingredients except the eggs. Mash the fish mixture and beat with a spoon. Beat egg yolks and fold in. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold in last. Fill a greased loaf pan with the mixture and pat down smooth. Cover with greased brown paper and tie it over the top. Set in a pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees until set and firm, about 1 hour. Loosen around the edges with a spatula and turn out on a hot platter. Serve hot with sour cream sauce.

Sour Cream Sauce
1 Tbsp. butter
1 Tbsp. flour
½ C. milk
1 C. thick sour cream
Minced chives, onion, or parsley
Paprika
Salt and pepper

Melt butter in saucepan. Blend in flour; when smooth add milk. Cook until smooth and thick. Just before serving add sour cream. Add chives, onion or parsley, and a dash of paprika. Stir constantly until just heated through. Keep flame low or sauce will curdle. Season with salt and pepper.

Lemon Meringue Tarts
1½ C. sugar
¼ C. cornstarch
¼ C. flour
1½ C. boiling water
4 egg yolks
1 tsp. lemon rind
¼ C. lemon juice
1 tsp. butter
Baked tart shells
Meringue

Mix dry ingredients. Add boiling water gradually and stir constantly until mixture boils. Place over bottom of double boiler and cook 20 minutes longer, stirring constantly. Slowly pour mixture over egg yolks, return to double boiler and cook 2 minutes longer. Add butter, rind, and juice. Cool filling and baked tart shells. Add filling to shells and spread with meringue. Bake at 350 degrees until meringue is browned.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

The military men with whom I talk, seem to think the threat now, at this stage of developments, implies a Russian chance to create some limited chaos in this country by sudden missile attack, accompanied by domestic Communist uprisings, but suggests that invasion would be out of the question. They see a threat of terror against us, maybe, but no possibility of conquest. They think public awakening to this threat may have been overdone (witness our aerial panicky sensitivity) because Russia would have to control a great stock of missiles capable of maintaining sustained attack, many thousands of airplanes for invasion, and a system of supply which would defy all efficiency experts. (Airfields would have to be seized progressively advancing toward the point of attack, and these (as well as missile launching bases), would have to be maintained against counter-attack.) The gasoline problem alone would create a deterrent which Russia could hardly be expected to meet with existing supplies.

Such an attack would necessarily fail if it even gave time for successful counterattack. Missile-launching areas would be subject to airplane attack and missile destruction. Russian oil is limited and vulnerable. Defensive services have explored possibilities of creating an airscreen north of us in Canada to blunt the effectiveness of missile flights, throwing them off mark or destroying them. The whole attack would require catastrophic destruction of such swift, devastating scope as to raise sound questions about when, if ever, the Russians would be capable of it.

On the other hand the Russians, far from being isolated militarily behind an iron curtain, are weak and openly susceptible to counterattack. A factual exposure of their unnoticed and unadvertised condition will be carried in a subsequent column, showing their iron curtain to be tissue paper from their defense standpoint.

TWO DIVORCES ASKED

Alleging that her husband, Marshall E. Pritchard, 925 South Washington street, refused to speak to her for "two and three days at a time," Mrs. Lucille E. Pritchard filed suit for divorce in Pickaway county common pleas court, Thursday, accusing him of extreme cruelty.

Mrs. Pritchard also asks for alimony, determination of their respective rights in the property at 925 South Washington street, and their furniture and auto. The petition says they were married Aug. 6, 1932 at Greenup, Ky., and that they are childless.

In another divorce suit filed Thursday, Mrs. Marie Litten, Ashville, married more than 31 years, charges Harry A. Litten, Ashville, with gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty. The petition contains no details of the accusation but says they were married Sept. 12, 1915 at Covington, Ky. Mrs. Litten also asks for alimony, determination of their property rights, and for the custody of two minor daughters, Judith Mae and June Faye.

Net sales of the Container Corporation of America which operates a factory in Circleville increased almost 56 per cent during the first six months of 1947, it was learned Saturday, as compared with the first six months of 1946.

A financial report issued Friday from the company's Chicago, Ill. headquarters showed that the net profits during the first half of 1947 amounted to more than double the net profits during the first half of 1946.

The report said the net sales in 1947 up to July 1 totaled $63,461,921, as against $40,716,000 for the corresponding period in 1946 or an increase of 55.9 per cent. The working capital increased $766,625 and the earned surplus increased $3,428,859 since Jan. 1, 1947.

The net profits in 1947 up to June 30, the report said, totaled $5,664,668, as against a total of $2,692,551 during the first half of 1946.
